LANCASTER, GARRARD COUNTY.

—The Lancaster Burlesque Company played at the Opera House on Tuesday night to one of the largest and most appreciative audiences that ever assembled in this town. The receipts were about $150 and everybody was delighted with the novel and realistic performance. The boys all did well, but especial mention has been made of J. M. Farra, Fleecy Robinson, J. M. Rothwell, Claude Wieritt, T. J. Hood, S. P. Denny, Capt. Fletcher Dwyer, John Dwyer, A. G. Scott, James Dillman, J. F. Lear and L. D. Hollingsworth. The boys think of visiting some of the neighboring towns and if they do they should receive a hearty welcome.

—Monday was county court day and while there was a large crowd in town there was very little business transacted. There were about 250 head of cattle on the market, but prices ranged so high that there were but few sales made. Quite a number of plug horses and mules changed hands at the usual prices. It was the regular "horse show" day and an unusually large number of fine stallions brought upon the public square just after dinner. I only succeeded in getting a partial list of them which is as follows: Huguley's Delegate and Woodspite, Knut's Brownie and Memento, Curry's Brilliant, Will's Trounser and McGrath, Elkin's Arthur Sumner 3011 and Wyandotte 3526, Underwood's Chance, Walker's McHenry and Orange Wilkes, Dittin's Breeze Wilkes, Bright's Lander and lots of other fine ones. Taking it altogether it was the best show of fine horses we have had for a long time. The day passed off quietly, not a single arrest being made.

—E. Walton Eastland and Graham Price, of Hanville, came over Tuesday night to attend the entertainment "Order of Hercules." Harry Giovannoli of the Advocate was here in the interest of that paper Monday. We are exceedingly glad to state that Mr. R. E. Hughes is able to be out again, after a long and serious attack of the grippe. The genial John Farris of your town was here Monday mingling with his numerous friends. He drove the handsome black stallion "George Dictator," a half brother to Jay Eye See. John will not pull the ribbons over any thing but a good one. A. M. Kinnard, of Middleborough, was here Tuesday. J. H. Brown and family are visiting in Mt. Vernon. Willie Dunlap has returned from the Sanibel Islands. Mrs. M. H. Dwyer has been quite sick for several days. Mrs. W. F. Dunlap and daughter, Eugenia, are visiting at R. A. Burdette's. J. M. Logan has returned from Middleborough. Mrs. Joseph Mount, of La Grange, Ky., is visiting her brother, R. E. McRoberts. The con. committee on the location of the capital listened attentively to seven hours of spread eagle oratory and at its conclusion it is said that they announced individually and collectively that what they had heard had not changed the views of a single member. So much for oratory, and its effects. What is needed is more common sense and less wind.

A friend over the way sends kindly greetings to that accomplished young attorney, P. M. McRoberts. It is a pleasure to convey such a message to one who is both a gentleman and a scholar. Whether in the walks of private life or the duties incident to his profession his record will always be bright and clean. The older people remember with veneration his distinguished father, than whom Kentucky never produced a better or more estimable citizen.

The literary critic of the Louisville Times has a poor opinion of the novel recently issued from the press, by H. H. Smith, a delegate to the con. con. entitled "The Downfall of a Politician." As most of the politicians of the present day never rise very high, they do not have very far to fall, when they commence their downward career, which, sooner or later is the fate of the demagogue and slyster. Mr. Smith's non de plume is "Bell Eli;" and if the Times is right, Eli needs to be belled.

—Hon. John Young Brown, addressed an immense audience at the court-house on Monday, county court day. His claims for the nomination were presented with becoming modesty and while making an able, eloquent and earnest presentation of the cause he represents he referred to the opposite party with that courtesy that always characterizes the gentleman who understands and observes the proprieties of life. He evidently made a fine impression upon the democracy of Garrard.

On the 26th of February Mr. Marion Biggs, of California, made a speech in the House of Representatives in which he said: "My friend from New York, Mr. Spinola, talks about the heroes who suffered during the revolution. It is well enough, Mr. Chairman, to honor our illustrious forefathers, to emulate their patriotism and pluck, and teach our children to do the same; but the distresses of the living are more important than the heroic actions of the dead." As

Mr. Spinola, in referring to our illustrious forefathers, evidently had no intention of underrating the distress of the living, it is difficult to discern the propriety of Mr. Biggs' remarks. He asked how do the sufferings of our revolutionary heroes compare with those of the honest toiler on our mortgage-ridden farms? As there is no similarity in the mode of suffering referred to, statesman Biggs' question is not easy of solution. He then pointed upon poor Representative Cannon, of Illinois, and gave him a tongue lashing, the like of which has never before been heard in the Capitol of the nation. He called him "the windy objector" and said that the castigation he received in November had not caused him to open his eyes to the errors of his ways or made him repent in sack cloth and ashes. Mr. Biggs also said that "fortunately he was a farmer instead of a lawyer or a professional man," and therein Mr. Biggs was right. Any man who is able to own a farm ought to thank his stars that he has one and that he can make a living without having to resort to a profession; but as every one is not the owner of a farm, Mr. Biggs will readily see that there are other honorable vocations in which men are justified in earning their daily bread. Mr. Biggs complains of money things that have been done in the interest of capitalists, but nothing exceeds his contempt for the imposition of a tax of 30 cents a dozen on eggs, which, he says, has increased their price beyond the regular cold weather quotations. He then referred to beans and said, "Beans—the idea of 50 cents a bushel on beans—pray who is affected by this measure except our Massachusetts brothers?" The speaker is evidently mistaken in the assumption that the use of beans is confined to the state of Massachusetts, but if the price of the article, affected none except our Massachusetts brothers, why should our California brother allow his mind to be disturbed upon that subject? Mr. Biggs is doubtless a statesman as well as a farmer, but notwithstanding his business for eggs, it is doubtful whether he could set a hen on a hill side, or tell the difference between beans and peas with his eyes shut. He states that he only had the privilege of attending school three months out of the year and worked the other nine, and in conclusion, congratulated himself upon the fact that he had given his four sons collegiate education, and had taught them how to use every implement upon a farm from a gimlet up to a threshing machine. Unhappy Mr. Biggs! We tender you a dozen eggs with beans as an accompaniment. Whether they were had by Kentucky democratic beans, republican beans or farmers alliance beans, is a matter of but little consequence; they are good all the same. Will you have them scrambled, poached, soft boiled or hard? Pull down the bars and turn the farm boys into the harvest field, while you devour the eggs and cuss congress and the gold bugs.

—Having sold out my business I desire to settle up with the world and respectfully ask those indebted to me to please come forward and settle. J. F. Hohlman.

Professor Charles A. Young, the eminent Princeton astronomer, recently sat chatting in the court of the Palace. One of his listeners could not refrain from asking him in an off-hand way:

"What is to you the most wonderful and startling fact of astronomy?"

"A fact that your great Lick telescope reveals about 100,000,000 of stars, and that every one of them is a sun, theoretically and by analogy giving light and heat to his planets. You know the Lick telescope reveals stars so small that it would require 30,000 of them to be visible to the naked eye."

Reports show a squeeze in the lemon market.

In justice to Maj. Norman we, while we are up, will say also that no reflection was meant upon his character as a man or democrat. What we did mean, or to be plain, was this: Maj. Norman held from the beginning of Gen. Hewitt's term, and by his appointment the most important and lucrative position in the auditor's office. His relation to Hewitt was of the closest. When Gen. Hewitt resigned the position of auditor Maj. Norman, through his influence, was appointed his successor. He has been there 12 years and is thoroughly identified with the administration of that office. We do not desire unnecessarily to stir up an old stench, but it is notorious, and indeed has been judicially determined by the highest court of the State, that, but for gross carelessness and neglect of duty in that office during the time mentioned, the Tate defalcation and looting of the treasury could not have occurred. Doubtless, as we are glad to believe, this failure to discharge plain statutory duty was occasioned, not by bad or improper motives, but by misplaced and unwarranted confidence in the integrity of Mr. Tate. But all the same it resulted in a great scandal and loss of public money, and the democratic party is naturally sought to be held responsible for it. The nomination of Mr. Norman, Hewitt's intimate and appointee, who has required past favors for giving to Gen. Hewitt's brother the best and most responsible position in the office, would be construed by the people of the State as an endorsement and continuation of the Hewitt administration. That administration was in many particulars a most admirable one, and is defensible we believe in all particulars, but we do not regard it as good policy to invite a campaign in which the democracy would be put on the defensive from the start. We re-
